

FAMILY LEGACIES

Decide what you'll keep:

You probably have things you received that are wonderful and need to be kept and passed on. Other things may need to be thrown out. Or, perhaps you have a weak legacy that needs strengthening.

Whatever you received, you can now intentionally pass along the good. This isn't always easy. If you saw hypocrisy in your parents' lives, you may be tempted to throw everything out even though much of what your parents modeled was good. Don't. That would be like burning down the house to get rid of some bugs.

Realize that there is a being who can redeem even the "bad stuff" in your legacy. Unfortunately many of us have parts of our legacy that are weak or even awful. Maybe one of your parents was an alcoholic or abusive or didn't provide the nurturing you needed. In today's society, the stories of such families are common. You may be asking, "How do I give something I didn't receive? Nobody modeled this stuff for me."
