Health Care in Transition Anne Ramsay Somers,1971 Healthcare in Transition Alan Cribb,2017-10-11 A call for change in healthcare thinking Healthcare in Transition explores the fundamental currents and tensions behind recent trends in policy such as shared decision making coproduction and personalization While these trends are often discussed in connection with a transition in epidemiological thought Alan Cribb argues that they instead embody a philosophical shift a change in our conception of healthcare and of appropriate forms of knowledge and analysis As clinical concerns are increasingly nested within social concerns policy analysis must engage with the multiple philosophical tensions that are now at the heart of the healthcare debate Cribb s focus on these key underlying ideas could not be more timely Accessibly written and with international relevance Healthcare in Transition will help fuel a shift from a delivery model of healthcare to a deliberative one Health Systems in Transition Thomas Rice,Pauline Rosenau,Lynn Y. Care Transition Management and the Transfer of Health Information pose challenges in providing comprehensive care and continuity of care which leads to an increase in utilization of Emergency Care services and redundancy of services provided to patients throughout the process of healthcare Professionals working together to treat a patient at times fail to communicate effectively with one another Transition management is the ongoing support of patients and their families as they navigate healthcare and relationships among more than one healthcare provider and or more than one health care setting or service There is little research on the effects of a universal policy for transitioning patients and managing the transition of a patient in all aspects of healthcare This literature review sought to understand how Care Transition Management Policy and Electronic Health Records EHR affect the rate of utilization of Emergency Care It also aimed to determine the impact of Transition Management Policy and Electronic Health Records on Emergency Care procedure utilization ACOs and EHR may be at the forefront of meeting health record transfer comprehensive care and Care Transition Management needs The findings of this research indicate a reduction in healthcare cost among ACOs The ACOs provided either unchanged quality of care or improved quality of care suggesting that they can be cost effective Though health transition management affects all aspects of healthcare disadvantaged communities and individuals are at greater risk for exposure to issues brought upon by difficulties in managing transition Portfolios of records transition coaches policy outlining step by step transition health literacy screening follow up appointments point of contacts and point persons to serve patients have all been implemented to decrease the issues caused by transition ACO transition policy and EHR have demonstrated the ability to decrease readmission rates and redundancy in services as well as promote a more thorough understanding of transition home in inpatient and outpatient settings as well as follow up care by patients

Healthcare Transitions and the Aging Population Dianne Morrow Ross,2008

Healthcare services for the aging population in the United States are a complex configuration of acute healthcare organizations and post acute nursing facilities home healthcare and community based services The system encompasses all services that imply the need for clinical medical or professional judgment Baldrige National Quality Program 2006 Most Americans believe the system exists to provide preventive services management for chronic conditions and health care services to meet the needs of the people National Committee for Quality Assurance NCQA 2004 However the healthcare delivery system is fragmented across a broad array of settings Coleman Smith Frank Min Parry Kramer 2004 plagued by gaps in quality of care and does not provide optimal care to the majority of American citizens NCQA 2004 As a result national efforts are focused on the identification of quality indicators performance measures and the driving need for consensus standards across a multiplicity of providers payers and stakeholders The overarching focus of this effort is to bridge the gaps in health care quality and reduce documented disparities for vulnerable populations National Quality Forum 2004 Healthcare transitions occur as patients receive a broad range of services across a multiplicity of providers payers and settings Aging patients 65 are most vulnerable during these transitions A poorly executed transition can result in complications for the patient duplication of tests and services discharge delays increased lengths of stay early readmissions to the acute care setting frustration for families and care givers and dissatisfaction with overall services Management of care and accountability across settings is limited and patients are falling through the cracks in the foundation of the healthcare system Covinsky 2003 The intent of this research was to examine healthcare transitions for patients 65 admitted to a large acute healthcare system and to identify measurable quality indicators for an innovative delivery model designed to optimize early discharge from the hospital through rapid rehabilitation This was a quasi experimental cross sectional design measured at the patient level The research included a total sample of 250 patients representing both the intervention and the control group The intervention group consisted of 100 patients who were rapidly discharged to a transitional care facility in the community and 150 patients randomly selected to a control group that did not transition to rapid rehabilitation The groups were matched as closely as possible by age gender race primary diagnoses and the complexity of case Inefficiency was measured by 3 indicators 1 length of stay 2 total expenses before contractual allowances and 3 discharge delays from the hospital Ineffectiveness was measured by 3 indicators 1 readmission within 30 days 2 patient safety with falls serving as the proxy and 3 overall patient satisfaction Descriptive analysis was performed utilizing SPSS 15 0 Path analysis was method of choice for data analysis and AMOS 7 0 was utilized for the measurement model Descriptive analysis found a broad range of diagnosis related groups across 183 women and 67 men with a mean age of 80 for both groups Initial analysis found the intervention group had a mean length of stay of 9 17 days and experienced 20 readmissions The control group had a mean length of stay of 6 77 days and 30 readmissions The statistical analysis suggested length of stay and cost of healthcare services are statistically significant indicators at the 0 05 or lower level and that patient safety has the potential to be developed as an indicator for effective outcomes The identification of quality indicators measurement of efficiency and effectiveness and establishing predictors for successful healthcare transitions is dependent on the quality and integrity of data abstracted from hospital information systems accuracy of information in patient records and the consensus of standards and definitions across a multiplicity of stakeholders Further research and collaboration is necessary to ensure that patient transition to innovative care programs such as rapid rehabilitation is based on well defined patient selection criteria The intent of the methodologies and quality indicators explored in this research supports the increasing need to ensure that inferences and quality measurements drawn from healthcare information is based on valid reliable and well defined data sources Pan Fergusson Schweitzer Hebert 2005 This research suggests hospitals are making steady progress to overcome challenges to safe quality health services as outlined by the Institute of Medicine 2001 for system redesign but finds specific implications for hospital leadership There is a need to thread evidence based practice initiatives into hospital and clinical structures to accommodate new delivery models processes and case management Health services information needs to be housed in a central repository or data warehouse to increase transparency of reportable information across systems and to ensure that valid and reliable information is utilized to draw inferences about performance of hospital systems Selden Sowa 2004 and that quality measurements are established to ensure a scientific foundation for the management of healthcare services Wan 2002
