Dreamweaver 3 : H-O-T Hands-on Training Lynda Weinman, Garo Green, 2000 On Dreamweaver Hands-on Internet for Windows Neil J. Salkind, 1995-10 HTML in Easy Steps Mike McGrath, 2003 Now in full colour HTML 4 in easy steps teaches the reader how to write computer programs using the HTML language It covers all the essential features of this complex topic and guides the reader gently through to enable them to produce web pages and then to publish them to the Web Aging Femininities Josephine Dolan, 2020-05-15 Older women have never been so visible or so problematised in popular media culture as now but what kinds of representations are being offered and how can we make sense of them in the context of post feminism and global economic change Aging Femininities Troubling Representations offers a timely intervention into the hiatus between the visibility of aging femininity in contemporary circuits of culture and its marginalisation in cultural theory From graceful agers and Saga subscribers to make over models and pop divas each of the essays in this collection interrogates the different manifestations of aging femininity in terms of both its historic invisibility and its new visibility The book forges links between contemporary lived experience and feminist cultural theory and research often through the direct and autobiographical knowledge of the writers themselves Divided into four sections Cultural Herstories Regulations and Transgressions Problematic Postfeminists and Divas and Dolls plus a thought provoking photo essay it wrests the discourse of aging away from the twin hegemonies of consumer culture and gerontology to present a diverse selection of essays and positions Aging Femininities Troubling Representations establishes the long overlooked richness and the complexity of this field of study Light on the Web Wendy G. Lehnert, 2001 Light on the Web is designed to teach the basics of the World Wide Web It provides readers with what they need to know to get started such as general navigation skills using and managing e mail effective and efficient searching techniques online safety and an introduction to Web page and Web site construction It is written for a short course on Web essentials or as a supplement to another course with Web elements as well as for self study Research & Education Networking , 1996-07 HTML Mike McGrath, 2003 Voices that must be heard: minorities and indigenous people combating climate change Farah Mihlar,2008-11-19 From the Batak people of Indonesia to the Karamojong in Africa those who are least responsible for climate change are amongst the worst affected by it They are often referred to in generic terms such as the world s poor or vulnerable groups by international organizations the media and the United Nations UN But these descriptions disguise the fact that specific communities often indigenous and minority peoples are more vulnerable than others The impact of climate change for them is not at some undefined point in the future It is already being felt to devastating effect Lives have already been lost and communities are under threat their unique linguistic and cultural traditions are at risk of disappearing off the face of the earth In a statement to mark World Indigenous Day in August 2008 the UN Secretary General Ban Ki moon commented on the threat to indigenous languages saying The loss of these languages would weaken not only the world s cultural diversity but also our collective knowledge as a human race But all too often the impacts of global warming on human diversity are overlooked More column inches have been devoted to the polar bear s plight than to the Inuit the Arctic people who live in harmony with the wilderness This briefing paper addresses this gap and brings together a rare collection of interviews with members of minority and indigenous groups from across the world The people presented here include communities from the El Molo on the shores of Lake Turkana in Northern Kenya to Sami reindeer herders in Finland that live in remote regions of the world who have very limited access to the media or to international organizations and whose voices are rarely heard These stories are being told in critical times when major international decisions on climate change are being taken UN member states are currently negotiating a climate change deal that will set carbon emission and other targets for countries to achieve beyond 2012 This deal is expected to be reached at a state level meeting in Copenhagen Denmark in December 2009 The penultimate state level negotiations on this issue will take place in Poznan Poland in December 2008 Yet these vital discussions will take place with little or no input from the communities most affected As indigenous and minority communities are often politically and socially marginalized in their own countries and in some cases discriminated against they are unlikely to be consulted on any national or international level climate change strategies But the message from the interviews presented here is clear these communities want their voices heard They want to be part of the climate change negotiations at the highest level This briefing paper starts by outlining the key issues including how communities are affected by climate change and their role at international level discussions It presents the testimonies and in conclusion it considers the way forward for these communities and makes a series of recommendations on how governments and the UN can harness their distinct knowledge
