

CHAPTER 2

Listening to texts

In this chapter you will listen to a range of texts to

- identify features of language used by the texts
- discuss the effects of using various language features
- identify the purpose of different texts and the audience for which they were written
- identify attitudes and beliefs displayed in spoken texts
- relate spoken texts to your own experience.

Story time

Small children love to listen to stories that are read to them: places are visited, people are introduced, and worlds created. When you sit to listen to a story, it is a time set aside – there is no skimming through pages, no reading back over that last sentence and no flicking to the end just to check. You can close your eyes and let your mind take you on a journey.

A particular feature of listening to a text is that it can bring out the rhythms of the words, and the patterns in the sounds. Imagery and description can have an enhanced effect as we imagine the world being presented to us.
