The Third Digital Divide Massimo Ragnedda, 2017-02-17 Drawing on the thought of Max Weber in particular his theory of stratification this book engages with the question of whether the digital divide simply extends traditional forms of inequality or whether it also includes new forms of social exclusion or perhaps manifests counter trends that alleviate traditional inequalities whilst constituting new modalities of inequality With attention to the manner in which social stratification in the digital age is reproduced and transformed online the author develops an account of stratification as it exists in the digital sphere advancing the position that just as in the social sphere inequalities in the online world go beyond the economic elements of inequality As such study of the digital divide should focus not simply on class dynamics or economic matters but cultural aspects such as status or prestige and political aspects such as group affiliations Demonstrating the enduring relevance of Weber s distinctions with regard to social inequality The Third Digital Divide A Weberian approach to rethinking digital inequalities explores the ways in which online activities and digital skills vary according to crucial sociological dimensions explaining these in concrete terms in relation to the dynamics of social class social status and power As such it will be of interest to social scientists with interests in sociological theory the sociology of science and technology and inequality and the digital divide

International Journal of Advertising ,2009 Gender and Occupational Outcomes Helen M. G. Watt,Jacquelynne S. Eccles,2008 Despite concentrated research and important legislative milestones on gender equality over the past quarter century gender related disparities in science technology and math careers persist into the 21st century This persistence sustains a troubling state of gender inequity in which women are not sharing in the salary and status advantages attached to scientific and technical careers In this landmark volume editors Watt and Eccles both well known for their research contributions in this area compile a rich source of longitudinal analysis that places the problem in context Experts from different countries in the fields of developmental and social psychology human development biology education and sociology draw on multi wave longitudinal data on the gender related variables that influence occupational outcomes book jacket Leaks in the Pipeline to Math, Science, and Technology Careers Janis E. Jacobs, Sandra D. Simpkins, 2005 Around the world the need for highly trained scientists and technicians remains high especially for positions that require employees to have a college degree and skills in math science and technology The pipeline into these jobs begins in high school but many leaks occur before young people reach the highly educated workforce needed to sustain leadership in science and technology Students drop out of the educational pipeline in science and technology at alarming rates at each educational transition beginning in high school but women and ethnic minority youth drop out at a faster rate Women and minorities are consistently underrepresented in science and engineering courses and majors They account for a small portion of the work force in high paying and more innovative jobs that require advanced degrees This schism between the skills necessary in our ever changing economy and the skill set that most young adults acquire is troubling It leads us to ask the question that forms the basis for this issue Why are adolescents and young adults particularly women and minorities opting out of the math science and technology pipeline The volume addresses gender and ethnic differences in the math science and technology pipeline from multiple approaches including theoretical perspectives a review of the work in this field presentation of findings from four longitudinal studies and a discussion of research implications given the current educational and economic climate This is the 110th issue of the Jossey Bass quarterly report series New Directions for Child and Adolescent Development
