Gender Interaction And Inequality:

Gender, Interaction, and Inequality Cecilia L. Ridgeway, 2013-03-09 Causal explanations are essential for theory building In focusing on causal mechanisms rather than descriptive effects the goal of this volume is to increase our theoretical understanding of the way gender operates in interaction Theoretical analyses of gender's effects in interaction in turn are necessary to understand how such effects might be implicated with individual level and social structural level processes in the larger system of gender inequality Despite other differences the contributors to this book all take what might be loosely called a microstructural approach to gender and interaction All agree that individuals come to interaction with certain common socially created beliefs cultural meanings experiences and social rules These include stereotypes about gendered activities and skills beliefs about the status value of gender rules for interacting in certain settings and so on However as individuals apply these beliefs and rules to the specific contingent events of interaction they combine and reshape their implications in distinctive ways that are particular to the encounter As a result individuals actively construct their social relations in the encounter through their interaction The patterns of relations that develop are not completely determined or scripted in advance by the beliefs and rules of the larger society Consequently there is a reciprocal causal relationship between constructed patterns of interaction and larger social structural forms The constructed patterns of social relations among a set of interactants can be thought of as micro level social structures or more simply microstructures Handbook of the Sociology of Gender Janet Saltzman Chafetz, 2006-11-22 During the past three decades feminist scholars have successfully demonstrated the ubiquity and omnirelevance of gender as a sociocultural construction in virtually all human collectivities past and present Intrapyschic interactional and collective social processes are gendered as are micro meso and macro social structures Gender shapes and is shaped in all arenas of social life from the most mundane practices of everyday life to those of the most powerful corporate actors Contemporary understandings of gender emanate from a large community of primarily feminist scholars that spans the gamut of learned disciplines and also includes non academic activist thinkers However while incorporating some cross disciplinary material this volume focuses specifically on sociological theories and research concerning gender which are discussed across the full array of social processes structures and institutions As editor I have explicitly tried to shape the contributions to this volume along several lines that reflect my long standing views about sociology in general and gender sociology in particular First I asked authors to include cross national and historical material as much as possible This request reflects my belief that understanding and evaluating the here and now and working realistically for a better future can only be accomplished from a comparative perspective Too often American sociology has been both tempero and ethnocentric Second I have asked authors to be sensitive to within gender differences along class racial ethnic sexual preference and age cohort lines Gender attitudes in agriculture and positivity bias: A survey experiment in four countries in Sub-Saharan Africa Ragasa, Catherine, Lambrecht, Isabel B., Ma, Ning, Cole, Steven, Ebrahim,

Mohammed, Desta, Gizaw, Mersha, Abiro Tigabie, Mudereri, Bester, Kihuu, Evelyne, Kreye, Christine, Peter, Hellen, 2025-09-23

Extensive prior research has demonstrated that reducing gender discrimination enhances women's empowerment, promotes more inclusive livelihoods, increases agricultural productivity, and improves other development outcomes. This study aims to contribute to documenting and informing the measurement of gender attitudes that relate directly to reaching, benefiting, and empowering women through agricultural innovations. By analyzing data from 8,051 survey respondents across study sites in Democratic Republic of the Congo, Ethiopia, Nigeria, and Rwanda, our findings emphasize both commonalities and differences in gender attitudes across different contexts. Furthermore, by including a survey-based experiment during data collection, we assess whether gender attitude statements vary depending on whether they are presented in a positive frame focusing on equality or in a negative frame focusing on inequality. On average, rural women and men respondents across all countries supported more than half of the gender equality statements. Some gender inequality attitudes persisted across the four countries but varied in magnitude and by location, age group, and specific statement or theme. Framing matters: respondents exposed to a positive framing supported 16 percent more gender equality statements than those exposed to a negative framing. The study highlights two main implications. First, the findings indicate the importance of considering both restrictive attitudes and those that reflect gender equality opportunities as being in the vanguard. Accordingly, gender-focused interventions should adopt strategies that challenge normative views of women as supporting rather than leading actors in agriculture and economic activities. Second, gender attitude measures do not perfectly align with country-level gender equality indicators or with empowerment at the intrahousehold level. They therefore capture a distinct dimension and merit their own indicators.

Framed by Gender Cecilia L. Ridgeway, 2011-02-09 In an advanced society like the U.S. where an array of processes work against gender inequality, how does this inequality persist? Integrating research from sociology, social cognition, and psychology and organizational behavior, Framed by Gender identifies the general processes through which gender as a principle of inequality rewrites itself into new forms of social and economic organization. Cecilia Ridgeway argues that people confront uncertain circumstances with gender beliefs that are more traditional than those circumstances. They implicitly draw on the too-convenient cultural frame of gender to help organize new ways of doing things, thereby reinscribing trailing gender stereotypes into the new activities, procedures, and forms of organization. This dynamic does not make equality unattainable but suggests a constant struggle with uneven results. Demonstrating how personal interactions translate into larger structures of inequality, Framed by Gender is a powerful and original take on the troubling endurance of gender inequality.

Social Psychology Karen A. Hegtvedt, Cathryn Johnson, 2017-07-12 Social Psychology takes a sociological approach to the study of the individual in relationship to society. Its main purpose is to highlight how social psychology provides varied yet interrelated explanations for individuals' experiences in groups. The text tells the story of how these dynamics unfold, beginning with the central social characteristics of the individual to processes of perception and of interaction In the telling of this story it also notes some of the interesting cross cultural comparisons in regard to these dynamics

Gender Issues in Contemporary Society Stuart Oskamp,Mark Costanzo,1993-05-17 During the past two decades the study of how gender influences social life has moved from the outskirts to the centre of psychology. Some of psychology's most cherished assumptions have been challenged and feminist scholars proposed alternative views of human development, research methods, cognitive functioning, family life, and communication. These challenges have invigorated many areas of psychology. Distinctive in its emphasis on applied issues that have practical importance in the lives of women and men, this volume presents current knowledge about key gender issues and sheds light on problems and controversies. Specific issues explored include gender differences in emotion, desire for control, attitudes towards leader.

Handbook of Gender Research Rick Crandall, 1997 Annual Review of Sociology John Hagan, 1999 A collection of recent work in sociology organized in sections on theory and methods, social processes, institutions and culture, formal organizations, political and economic sociology, differentiation and stratification, urban and rural sociology, and sociology of world religions. Topics include sexuality in the workplace, women's movements in the Third World, cultural criminology, the sociology of entrepreneurship, and socioeconomic position and health. The editors are affiliated with Duke University and the University of Toronto.

Written by sociologists, this text examines several theoretical views, not just symbolic interactionism, and presents comprehensive coverage of social psychology. Theories added to this edition include affect control theory, differential association theory, reasoned action theory, and social control theory. The text shows how social psychology allows us to understand human behaviour.
