Dark Journey Allan W. Eckert,2009 In 1841 a party of men women and children set out from Missouri led by John Bidwell the prince of California pioneers Their trip to California across the plains and mountains as revealed in the journal of their leaders is a tribute to human courage endurance and faith The Bidwell pioneers were followed by many other parties including the Donner Reed party Caught in the Sierra Nevada mountains by the icy grip of an early winter the Donner party built crude shelters and struggled to survive Soup made of boiled leather and powdered bones became a luxury Of the 79 persons who started 34 died before an expedition out of California rescued the survivors Godey's Lady's Book ,1879 Includes music The National Medical Journal of China J. Priest,1979 Detailed mapping and geochemical analysis of Oligocene to early Pliocene volcanic rocks in the Little Walker volcanic center Mono County California have revealed a complex eruptive history After eruption of widespread rhyolitic ash flows of the Valley Springs Formation in the Oligocene Miocene to early Pliocene volcanism of the western Great Basin and northern Sierra Nevada was dominated by eruption of calc alkalic andesitic lavas bearing abundant hydrous mafic phenocrysts and thus high H₂O contents These kinds of calc alkaline magmas are associated with most of the major epithermal Au Ag districts of the western Great Basin A highly potassic latitic pulse of volcanism occurred at the Little Walker volcanic center about 9.5 m y ago during the ongoing calc alkalic activity The latitic series is unusually enriched in K and other incompatible elements as well as Fe compared to the surrounding calc alkaline rocks The latites have mineralogic evidence of much lower H₂O content than the calc alkaline lavas yet early latitic magmas were rich enough in volatiles to produce very large welded ash flow sheets e g the Eureka Valley Tuff Rapid evacuation of the magma reservoir beneath the Little Walker center during the ash flow activity resulted in formation of the Little Walker caldera Intracaldera volcanism culminated with extrusion of viscous phenocryst

rich plug domes and coulees of transitionally calc alkaline low K latite lava of the Lavas of Mahogany Ridge The low K latite series is severely depleted in all incompatible elements relative to early latitic rocks and has mineralogic geologic and trace element evidence of higher H₂O content relative to early latites Significant phenocrystic hornblende association with hydrothermal alteration and high Eu³ / Eu² all suggest significant H₂O concentration in the low K latite magmas These rocks probably come from a source region intermediate between that of the calc alkaline and latite series Trace and major element data favor generation of latitic magmas from a primitive mantle diapir The diapir rose into a subduction zone that was actively generating widespread calc alkalic lavas throughout the region from hydrous mantle and possibly lower crustal sources The latite magmas were drier and hotter than the calc alkaline magmas but were also enriched in volatiles particularly CO₂ and incompatible elements from their undepleted mantle source Rising latitic magmas may have gained additional incompatible elements by wall rock reaction and zone refining of upper mantle and lower crustal rocks Extensive qualitative trace element evidence of crystal fractionation shows that incompatible elements may have been further concentrated by variable amounts of crystal settling High pressure plagioclase poor pyroxene rich fractionation of the early dry latitic series produced low Ca Mg latites with high Fe Mg and Al₂O₃ but low SiO₂ Low pressure plagioclase rich differentiation of the early latitic magmas produced quartz latite ash flows with high SiO₂ and moderate Fe Mg while low pressure differentiation of hydrous low K latite magmas yielded silicic low K latite and quartz latite lavas with low Fe Mg More extensive separation of olivine relative to pyroxenes at low pressures and increased stability of subsilicic hydrous crystals and Fe Ti oxides in the hydrous magmas account for changes in differentiation trends caused by P_{total} and P_{H₂O} variations Lack of giant welded ash flow sheets in the hydrous calc alkaline series and common eruption of such ash flows from volcanic centers with rather anhydrous magmas led to the conclusion that H₂O CO₂ as well as total volatile content are critical controls on the likelihood of large scale hot ash flow eruptions Giant hot ash flow sheets and associated calderas are favored in magmas with low H₂O CO₂ and high total volatile content Basaltic and latitic volcanism in areas of thick sialic crust where crystal fractionation is extensive are therefore the best sources of giant ash flow sheets H₂O CO₂ and total volatile content were also critical controls of the probability of hydrothermal ore deposition Magmas with high H₂O CO₂ and moderate total volatile contents are most favored for ore deposition because such magmas tend to form mesozonal or epizonal plutons rather than volcanic rocks Plutonic crystallization of hydrous magma will yield a fluid phase capable of transferring incompatible metals and geothermal heat to ground water If permeable structures and rocks are present as in a caldera widespread mineralization will be favored but there may be no genetic relation between ore forming magmas and magmas which produce calderas
