
Coding in Free-Form RPG IV

This tutorial is intended for experienced programmers who want to learn RPG IV (also known as ILE RPG).

This tutorial assumes.

- That you have IBM i 7.1 or later so that you can use the free-form version of most RPG IV statement types. (There may be some coding examples that require later releases. If so, this will be noted with the example. But 7.1 will be sufficient for most of this tutorial.)

- That you have no prior knowledge of RPG III.

- That you have some prior knowledge of IBM i (also known as AS/400, iSeries, System i).

- That you know where to find the manuals for RPG in the IBM Knowledge Center.

The coding examples are intended to show the feature being discussed, but they sometimes have a "Bonus features for this example" section following the example that lists additional interesting things to note about the example, usually things that have not been discussed yet. Readers can choose to ignore those "Bonus features" sections without worrying about missing something, since the material is covered in later chapters.

Chapter 1: Hello world

This chapter takes you through the steps to create and run an RPG IV program.

It assumes you are using one of two ways to do your coding:

- RDI

- PDM and SEU through some type of 5250 emulator

Initial setup

If you are using RDI:

- Create a connection to your IBM i.

- Create a library. Remember the name of the library you create. You need it later when you call your first program. (Replace `yourlibrary` in the instructions with the name of the library you created.)

- Create a source file.

- Create a source member in the file called HELLO.RPGLE.

- Open the member in the editor.
