INTRODUCTION TO WRITING

1.1 THE WRITING PROCESS

We live in an information society that depends on communication in every facet of its existence. Imagine what a busy airport would be like without an advanced communication system. Businesses are dependent upon good communication among their employers, employees, and clients. Good communication among governments is crucial for world peace. Even the success of our interpersonal relationships hinges on our ability to communicate with others.

While much of our communication is oral, learning how to communicate in writing is a vital skill for anyone living in today's world. Back in 1682, John Sheffield said, "Of all those arts in which the wise excel, Nature's chief masterpiece is writing well." The most important action that you can take to shape a successful future for yourself is to learn how to write clearly and effectively.

Almost anyone can learn to write well by learning about the writing process. The writing process is simply the steps a person takes to put together a piece of writing.

SIX STAGES IN THE PROCESS OF WRITING

1. Prewriting	In this stage, you plan your writing; choose a topic, audience, purpose, and form; gather ideas; and arrange them logically.
2. Drafting	In this stage, you get your ideas down on paper without worrying about getting everything just right.
3. Peer and Self-Evaluation	Evaluation is the act of judging something. In this stage, you judge your writing to see how it might be improved. When a classmate judges your writing, that is called peer evaluation. When you judge your own writing, that is called self-evaluation.
4. Revising	In this stage, you work to improve the content, organization, and expression of your ideas.
5. Proofreading	In this stage, you check your writing for errors in spelling, grammar, capitalization, and punctuation. After correcting these errors, you make a final copy of your paper and proofread it again.
6. Publishing and Presenting	In this stage, you share your work with an audience.
