Policy, Ethics, and Economic Methodology Kristin Shrader-Frechette, 2012-12-06 If indeed scientists and technologists especially economists set much of the agenda by which the future is played out and I think they do then the student of scientific methodology and public ethics has at least three options He can embrace certain scientific methods and the value they hold for social decisionmaking much as Milton Friedman has accepted neoclassical economics Or he can condemn them regardless of their value much as Stuart Hampshire has rejected risk cost benefit analysis RCBA Finally he can critically assess these scientific methods and attempt to provide solutions to the problems he has uncovered As a philosopher of science seeking the middle path between uncritical acceptance and extremist rejection of the economic methods used in policy analysis I have tried to avoid the charge of being anti science Fred Hapgood in response to my presentation at a recent Boston Colloquium for the Philosophy of Science said that my arguments felt like a call for rejection of the methods of risk cost benefit analysis Not so as Chapter Two of this volume should make eminently clear All my criticisms are constructive ones and the flaws in economic methodology which I address are uncovered for the purpose of suggesting means of making good techniques better Likewise although I criticize the economic methodology by which many technology assessments TAs and environmental impact analyses EIAs have been used to justify public projects it is wrong to conclude that I am anti technology
