Far Fetched Facts:

Far-Fetched Facts Richard Rottenburg, 2009-04-17 A fictionalized ethnographic study of development aid in sub-Saharan Africa that focuses on technologies of inscription in the interactions of development banks international experts and local managers In 1996 the sub-Saharan African country of Ruritania launched a massive waterworks improvement project funded by the Normesian Development Bank headquartered in Urbania Normland and with the guidance of Shilling Partner a consulting firm in Mercatoria Normland Far Fetched Facts tells the story of this project as narrated by anthropologists Edward B Drotlevski and Samuel A Martonosi Their account of the Ruritanian waterworks project views the problems of development from a new perspective focusing on technologies of inscription in the interactions of development bank international experts and local managers This development project is fictionalized of course although based closely on author Richard Rottenburg's experiences working on and observing different development projects in the 1990s Rottenburg uses the case of the Ruritanian waterworks project to examine issues of standardization database building documentation calculation and territory mapping The techniques and technologies of the representational practices of documentation are crucial Rottenburg argues both to day to day management of the project and to the demonstration of the project's legitimacy Five decades of development aid or development cooperation as it is now sometimes known have yielded disappointing results Rottenburg looks in particular at the role of the development consultant often called upon to act as mediator between the other actors and at the interstitial spaces where developmental cooperation actually occurs He argues that both critics and practitioners of development often misconstrue the grounds of cooperation which he claims are moral legal and political rather than techno-scientific or epistemological

Buckton, 2007 Cruising with Robert Louis Stevenson Travel Narrative and the Colonial Body is the first book length study about the influence of travel on Robert Louis Stevenson's writings both fiction and nonfiction. Within the contexts of late Victorian imperialism and ethnographic discourse, the book offers original close readings of individual works by Stevenson while bringing new theoretical insights to bear on the relationship between travel authorship and gender identity in the Victorian fin de siècle. Oliver S. Buckton develops cruising as a critical term linking Stevenson's leisurely mode of travel with the striking narrative motifs of disruption and fragmentation that characterize his writings. Buckton traces the development of Stevenson's career from his early travel books to show how Stevenson's major works of fiction such as Treasure Island, Kidnapped, and The Ebb Tide draw on innovative techniques and materials Stevenson acquired in the course of his global travels. Exploring Stevenson's pivotal role in the revival of romance in the late nineteenth century, Cruising with Robert Louis Stevenson highlights Stevenson's treatment of the human body as part of his resistance to realism, arguing that the energies and desires released by travel are often routed through disturbingly resistant or darkly comic corporeal figures. Buckton gives extensive attention to Stevenson's writing about the South Seas, arguing that his groundbreaking critiques of European colonialism are formed in awareness of the fragility and desirability of Polynesian bodies and island landscapes. Cruising with Robert Louis Stevenson will be indispensable to all admirers of Stevenson as well as of great interest to readers of travel writing, Victorian ethnography, gender studies, and literary criticism.
