Flying Bats:

Bats M. Brock Fenton, Nancy B. Simmons, 2015-01-28 There are more than 1 300 species of bats or almost a quarter of the world's mammal species But before you shrink in fear from these furry creatures of the night consider the bat's fundamental role in our ecosystem A single brown bat can eat several thousand insects in a night Bats also pollinate and disperse the seeds for many of the plants we love from bananas to mangoes and figs Bats A World of Science and Mystery presents these fascinating nocturnal creatures in a new light Lush full color photographs portray bats in flight feeding and mating in views that show them in exceptional detail The photos also take the reader into the roosts of bats from caves and mines to the tents some bats build out of leaves A comprehensive guide to what scientists know about the world of bats the book begins with a look at bats origins and evolution The book goes on to address a host of questions related to flight diet habitat reproduction and social structure Why do some bats live alone and others in large colonies When do bats reproduce and care for their young How has the ability to fly unique among mammals influenced bats mating behavior A chapter on biosonar or echolocation takes readers through the system of high pitched calls bats emit to navigate and catch prey More than half of the world's bat species are either in decline or already considered endangered and the book concludes with suggestions for what we can do to protect these species for future generations to benefit from and enjoy From the tiny bumblebee bat the world's smallest mammal to the Giant Golden Crowned Flying Fox whose wingspan exceeds five feet A Battery of Bats presents a panoramic view of one of the world's most fascinating yet least understood species Vampire Bats Rebecca E. Hirsch, 2015-01-01 See what a vampire bat has in common with a sperm whale Find out what sets a vampire bat apart from a walrus or a groundhog Readers will compare and contrast key traits of vampire bats their appearance behavior habitat and life cycle to traits of other mammals Charts and sidebars support key ideas and provide details Through gathering information about similarities and differences readers will make connections and draw conclusions about what makes this animal a mammal and how mammals are alike and different from each other Animal Records Mark Carwardine, Natural History Museum (London, England), 2008 This guide features incredible facts about creatures from each of the main animal groups including mammals reptiles birds amphibians fish and insects Bat Bioacoustics M. Brock Fenton, Alan D. Grinnell, Arthur N. Popper, Richard R. Fay, 2016-06-02 Arguably biosonar is one of the eye opening discoveries about animal behavior and the auditory systems of echolocators are front and center in this story Echolocation by bats has proven to be a virtual gold mine for colleagues studying neurobiology while providing many rich examples of its impact on other areas of bats lives In this volume we briefly review the history of the topic reminding readers of the 1995 Hearing by Bats We use a chapter on new findings in the phylogeny of bats to put the information that follows in an evolutionary context This includes an examination of the possible roles of Prestin and FoxP2 genes and various anatomical features affecting bat vocalizations We introduce recent work on the role of noseleaves ears and other facial components on the focusing of sound and collection of echoes

How nature shaped echolocation in animals Mariana L Melcón, Cynthia F Moss, 2014-11-24 Echolocation has evolved in different groups of animals from bats and cetaceans to birds and humans and enables localization and tracking of objects in a dynamic environment where light levels may be very low or absent Nature has shaped echolocation an active sense that engages audiomotor feedback systems which operates in diverse environments and situations Echolocation production and perception vary across species and signals are often adapted to the environment and task In the last several decades researchers have been studying the echolocation behavior of animals both in the air and underwater using different methodologies and perspectives The result of these studies has led to rich knowledge on sound production mechanisms directionality of the sound beam signal design echo reception and perception Active control over echolocation signal production and the mechanisms for echo processing ultimately provide animals with an echoic scene or image of their surroundings Sonar signal features directly influence the information available for the echolocating animal to perceive images of its environment In many echolocating animals the information processed through echoes elicits a reaction in motor systems including adjustments in subsequent echolocation signals We are interested in understanding how echolocating animals deal with different environments e.g clutter light levels tasks distance to targets or objects different prey types or other food sources presence of conspecifics or certain predators ambient and anthropogenic noise In recent years some researchers have presented new data on the origins of echolocation which can provide a hint of its evolution Theoreticians have addressed several issues that bear on echolocation systems such as frequency or time resolution target localization and beam forming mechanisms In this Research Topic we compiled recent work that elucidates how echolocation from sound production through echolocation signals to perception has been shaped by nature functioning in different environments and situations We strongly encouraged comparative approaches that would deepen our understanding of the processes comprising this active sense
