

THE SENTINEL FOLDING GUIDE

Letter Fold (C Fold)

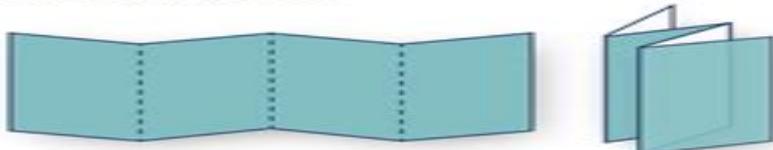

A C-fold (commonly called letter or tri-fold) uses two parallel folds to create 6 panels. The C-fold is used for 8.5 x 11 rack brochures as well as 6 page brochures (25.5 x 11 folding to 8.5 x 11).

Z Fold

A Z-fold is a folding method that uses two parallel folds to create six panels of equal size – three panels on each side of the paper. The Z fold is an effective fold when letters need to be nested, or inserted into one another. Nesting can be done simply and cleanly before insertion into envelopes.

Accordion Fold

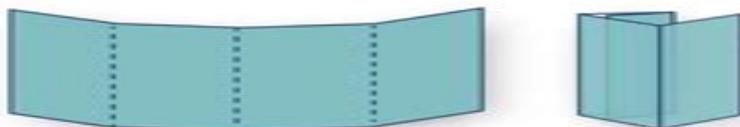

Typically accordion folds are to fold into pleats resembling the bellows of an accordion. They are simple zig-zag folds with 6-panels (or more) and two parallel folds that go in opposite directions. Each panel of the accordion fold is about the same size.

Double Gate Fold

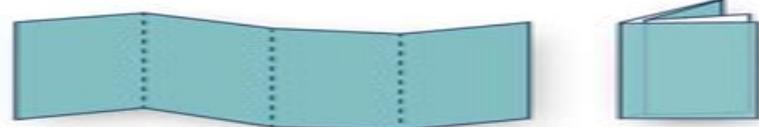

The Double Gate Fold has four double-sided panels. The paper is first folded like a gate fold with smaller side panels and then folded in half. When designing for a Gate fold of any kind it is best to be wary of what will be split on the fold. When possible, avoid splitting letters or fine elements since those elements print and must align from opposite sides edges of the sheet.

Barrel Roll Fold

The outside two panels (front and back of piece) are the same size and each successive panel must be slightly smaller to accommodate for the fold. The size of those panels should be dictated by the thickness of the paper used.

Double Parallel Fold

Paper is folded in half and then half again. The inside panels are slightly smaller than the outside panels.

Half-Fold (or 4 page)

The sheet is simply folded in half. Multiple 4 page pieces are used to create saddle stitched books. Half folds can create pieces with two different orientations: portrait (height larger than width) or oblong (height smaller than width).

French Fold (or 8 page right angle)

A sheet of paper is folded in half in one direction then in half at a right angle, or in the opposite direction. French folds are used often in the invitation setting where one side of the sheet is printed and the inside is blank. For booklets, printers often fold to create 8 page "signatures" where two sides of the sheet is printed, the piece is folded to create 8 pages and after saddle stitching, 3 sides are trimmed to create a booklet.
