

- SPARROWS are small brown-bodied birds with streaked backs and short conical beaks. Their food, mostly seeds except during the nesting season, is obtained on or near the ground. When not nesting, most are seen in flocks. Each species has its own habitat preferences, these may be diagnostic. Head and breast patterns are most helpful for identification; note also the length and shape of the tail. In most species females are very similar to males. Heads of adult males of most species are shown on this spread. The junco and longspurs are represented by one head each; the striking Lark Bunting, the Snow Bunting, the towhees, and the Olive Sparrow are omitted. Immatures of some species are much duller, especially those species with black or rufous on the head. Songs and chips of sparrows are often more easily distinguished than are their plumages. See pp. 328-345 for further details.
