

How do you finger someone?

We can use our fingers in lots of creative ways when touching someone's vulva and vagina. Fingers can rub, circle, gently squeeze or give mini-massages. Moving them fast or slowly in the direction you move them in, and applying light or heavier pressure around the vulva and genital area are all ways to 'do' fingering. Starting as gently as possible is a smart approach - you can always apply more pressure later.

Putting one or more fingers inside the vagina can also feel very pleasurable for the vagina-owner. Usually you can tell if the time is right by checking for wetness. If their fingers are not ready to go in, they can vary the pressure and how far they go in, but Fingering can also mean using hands and fingers to stimulate someone's anus. (This is not for everyone, so always ask first.) Touching around it or putting a finger or two inside it can be very stimulating, but remember to wash your hands thoroughly afterwards before moving on to another body part (such as the vulva or vagina). The anus and the skin around it have bacteria and there can easily be germs that can easily get into the rectum and cause pain.
