Getting In Touch Intimacy:

Getting Intimate Linn Sandberg, 2011-04-08 This thesis focuses on the intersections of masculinity old age and sexuality from the perspectives of old men themselves how they understand and experience sex and sexuality in later life The study uses qualitative in depth interviews and body diaries an exploratory method that asked men write about their bodies in everyday life Twenty two men born between 1922 and 1942 participated in the study The aim of the thesis is two fold firstly to study sexual subjectivities of old men how old men articulate and make meaning around sexuality in later life Secondly the study aims to explore theoretically what a male body may become in relation to ageing in what ways the ageing male body could be a site for rethinking masculinity and the male body This aim was inspired by feminist theories in dialogue with the deleuzian concept becoming Similarly to gender age is understood to take shape and become intelligible in social and cultural contexts Furthermore the thesis stresses the significance of the specificities of the ageing body to the shaping of masculinity sexuality and subjectivity The body is therefore discussed as an open materiality beyond the binaries of culture and nature materiality This thesis discusses the concepts intimacy and touch as central to how old men s sexual subjectivities take shape allowing for alternative conceptualisations of sexuality beyond erection and intercourse Intimacy and touch are understood and discussed in several different ways By orienting themselves to touch and intimacy the old men emerged as more mature unselfish and with more serene sexual desires This also involved them distancing themselves from the younger man other men whom they perceived as more selfish inconsiderate and with stronger sexual desires Intimacy and touch could in this respect be understood as resources for shaping desirable heterosexual masculinity An orientation to intimacy and touch enabled old men to appear as neither asexual nor as dirty old men But the study also suggests that a turn to intimacy and touch may open up possibilities for rethinking and reconfiguring sexuality masculinity and the male body The ageing body then need not be understood as an obstacle but as an enabling site that provides opportunities for intimacy and touch Moreover the thesis presents affirmative old age as an alternative conceptualisation of old age beyond both the discourses of successful ageing and the discourses of old age as negativity and decline As a theory of difference and bodily specificity affirmative old age may be of interest for further feminist theorising The Poetics of Intimacy and the Problem

Adrian Wright, 2023-02-15 Robots Won't Save Japan addresses the Japanese government's efforts to develop care robots in response to the challenges of an aging population rising demand for eldercare and a critical shortage of care workers Drawing on ethnographic research at key sites of Japanese robot development and implementation James Wright reveals how such devices are likely to transform the practices organization meanings and ethics of caregiving if implemented at scale This new form of techno welfare state that Japan is prototyping involves a reconfiguration of care that deskills and devalues care work and reduces opportunities for human social interaction and relationship building Moreover contrary to expectations that care robots will save labor and reduce health care expenditures robots cost more money and require additional human labor to tend to the machines As Wright shows robots alone will not rescue Japan from its care crisis The attempts to implement robot care instead point to the importance of looking beyond such techno fixes to consider how to support rather than undermine the human times spaces and relationships necessary for sustainably cultivating good care
